

Data breach following a hack

Hackers have no reservations about stealing data from your system. All businesses are vulnerable to hacking attempts, and even those with the best measures in place can face a security breach...

A large food and drinks brand had built a database of more than 100,000 customers, including their names and contact details. So when their IT system was successfully attacked by hackers, this sensitive information fell into the wrong hands.

Subsequent remedial action was very expensive. In addition to notifying the ICO (Information Commissioner's Office), the organisation had to alert those whose were put at risk by the hack, diverting a large quantity of manpower and resources to pay for an investigation. Needless to say, the resulting cost was a significant blow to their finances.

Had the business invested in insurance with RiskBox Cyber, they wouldn't have faced these costs alone. Our protection has been built to cover almost any fees that arise due to hacker damage, and the consequences that come with it.